Janice Koch is Professor Emeritus of Science Education in the Department of Curriculum and Teaching at Hofstra University, Long Island, New York. She developed and taught science education courses to elementary, middle, and secondary pre-and in-service teachers. 21st Century learning means teaching just as you have done in the past centuries, but with way better tools. Today's teachers have a great advantage, they have powerful learning tools at their disposal that they didn't have before. 21st Century technology is an opportunity for students to acquire more knowledge. 21st-century teaching means teaching as you have always taught but with today's tools and technology. It means utilizing everything that is important in today's world so that students will be able to live and prosper in today's economy, as well as having the ability to guide students and to prepare them for the future.
